Chicago burglars recently robbed a millinery store. If they can cash in their haul at market prices they have probably made a killing.

The Lakeland News says: "It will take a good hand in the game of politics to retire Frank Clark." Correct you are, brother. Frank can "go it alone" and "euchre" any two partners who may be pitted against him.

A hundred night riders, including the eight men whose death sentences for the murder of Capt. Rankin were reversed because the indictment did not mention the State, will be tried at a special November term in Union City, Tenn.

More Gainesville people have visited New York the past season than during any former year in the history of the town. A gentleman who has just returned from the great metropolis says he was surprised at the number of Gainesville people he met there daily.

Editor Howard's valedictory to The Orlando Reporter-Star is as follows: "Good bye, little girl, good bye. We've been mighty faithful to you. We've nursed you and fed you and coddled you and made you say sweet things every day, without a single miss, no matter how we felt, ever since you came into our hands. But this is the age of divorces and we have come to the parting of the ways. So long, little girl, so long!" Mr. Howard will hereafter devote his energies to building up The Citizen, which he has moved to Orlando.

A large sign board at White House, a forsaken station on the S. A. L. railway between Jacksonville and Baldwin, conveys the information that five-acre lots can be bought there for one hundred dollars. Why the devil does a fellow want to pay one hundred dollars for five acres of land at White House when he can purchase the same amount for less than half the sum at Paradise? White House is a very pretty name, 'tis true, but it does not compare with Paradise. When we have to make a change of residence we are going to cast our lot in Paradise—provided our credentials are sufficient to admit our entry. White House is further from Jacksonville than Paradise is from Gainesville.

SENATORIAL CANDIDATES.

The following editorial from The Tampa Tribune escaped our attention until it was copied in The Pensacola News, but it is so breezy and original in its manner of handling the candidates that we feel it will interest our readers:

"The Senatorial race for 1910 may be said to be already on. Four avowed candidates are in the field, not including the present incumbent, who may be safely counted as a candidate for re-election. This list is:

"J. P. Talliaferro, of Jacksonville.
"W. A. Blount, of Pensacola.
"L. J. Reeves, of Pensacola.
"Claude L'Engle, of Tallahassee.
"N. B. Broward, of Jacksonville.

"Every candidate in the list is from the northern section of the State. Not one is from the peninsular section. Jacksonville has two candidates (and the present junior Senator), Pensacola has two and Tallahassee one. South Florida's vote will decide the result. The balance of power is in this section. The strongest man in South Florida will be the winner.

"Of the five, Talliaferro and Broward are the strong candidates, at the present outlook. Blount would be a close contestant but for the fact that he has opposition in his own stronghold. Reeves will not get the vote that Blount will but practically every vote he gets will be a vote taken from Blount. He will make much greater inroads upon Blount than L'Engle will upon Broward. L'Engle will get a scattering vote in every part of the State. Blount will get a heavy vote in West Florida and a respectable vote in other sections. Reeves' strength will be limited to West Florida. Broward will carry the vestige of his former alliances, which, however, will be a formidable array of Browardites, a sort of 'Old Guard,' faithful to Napoleon. It is a force to be reckoned with in Florida. Some of it will go to L'Engle, but the L'Engle automobile will not be of great carrying capacity. It is liable to break down at any stage of the road and spill its occupants into the mud, where they will be picked up by the less showy but surer vehicles of other competitors. The L'Engle automobile will disseminate fuss and odor and will make the campaign more lively, even if more nauseous. But, if it crosses the finish line at all, it will be after the prize has been awarded, the winner congratulated and the crowd gone home.

"What of Talliaferro? He has said nothing and, so far as is apparent, done nothing as yet in relation to the contest. He has not even suggested the possibility of his candidacy—doubtless not deeming this necessary. But he's running now—that may be counted on. He realizes the difficulties of the contest, the new considerations and exactions incident to the new material which has offered itself before the people. Every man who will oppose him, except Broward, is an unknown quantity, so far as a State-wide contest is concerned. Not one of them has been a candidate before the people of the whole State. Blount, the astute, serious-minded, sober-mannered lawyer, hitherto wedded to his profession, in politics only as an indulgence or to assist his friends; Reeves, a judge and a State Senator, little known outside of his immediate neighborhood; L'Engle, journalistic free lance, well advertised, his real strength with the people before whom he has spectacularly disappeared for several years never yet tested—it is a puzzling combination, one to baffle the shrewdest of prognosticators. Against this field, three unknown, one known but subject to change, Senator Talliaferro must enter and fight.

"There is little doubt that, in South Florida, the present Senator is the strongest of the candidates. While a citizen of Jacksonville, his interests primarily linked with that section of the State, he has interests with us and he has reason to be with us. He has aided this section at every possible juncture in his career at Washington—and he is a man of power and influence at the capital. He has been in the Senate long enough to acquire a voice that counts for much more than his vote, the standing and the influence that, when necessary, can add other votes to his vote. Every member of Congress has a vote—the standing and the influence that when necessary, can add other votes to his vote. Senator Talliaferro is one of these. There is only one other man in the race who has the force and the ability of Mr. Talliaferro, and that is Mr. Blount. But, even though Mr. Blount were far superior to Mr. Talliaferro in ability, he could not acquire the influence at Washington that Mr. Talliaferro possesses in one term or in two terms. The man who's THERE has the advantage of experience, of acquaintance, of alignments and associations that make him increasingly valuable to his State in the proportion of the length of his service.

Not Coughing Today?

Yet you may cough tomorrow! Better be prepared for it when it comes. Ask your doctor about keeping Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house. Then when the hard cold or cough first appears you have a doctor's medicine at hand. Your doctor's approval of its use will certainly set all doubt at rest. Do as he says. He knows. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Robust health is a great safeguard against attacks of throat and lung troubles, but constipation will destroy the best of health. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Pills.

though Mr. Blount were far superior to Mr. Talliaferro in ability, he could not acquire the influence at Washington that Mr. Talliaferro possesses in one term or in two terms. The man who's THERE has the advantage of experience, of acquaintance, of alignments and associations that make him increasingly valuable to his State in the proportion of the length of his service.

"The race will be one of the most interesting that Florida ever knew. Nor is this far distant. It will be the first political excitement of the coming year. It will barely have passed and subsided, when the fury of the prohibition campaign will burst upon us.

"Regardless of the result of the two contests which will engage the whole State, we'll not lack for an uproar.

"No matter who gets the Senatorship and no matter how the prohibition election goes, we are sure, to use the vigorous language of Henry Watterson, to have a 'hell of a disturbance.'" and you will save yourself a lot of suffering and trouble. If you have a sudden chill—or take cold—if you have colic, cramp or diarrhoea, don't wait a minute. Take at once a teaspoonful of Perry Davis' Painkiller in a half a glass of hot water or milk. You'll be safe and on the right road to quick recovery. Then you'll escape serious illness. But you ought to have this tried and proven remedy on hand for immediate use. Being prepared is half the battle when there's pain to subdue. New size bottles 35c., also in 50-cent sizes.
